

An illustrated talk by Anthony Sheridan, B.Sc. (Econ)
Fellow of the Zoological Society of London

Creating a comfortable environment for both animals and visitors at Europe's leading zoos

Knut, the polar bear born at Berlin's Tiergarten

Wednesday, 26 May at 7.30pm. King Charles Church Hall, 3 Warwick Park, Tunbridge Wells (near the Brew House Hotel).

Admission: £3 (TWTFa members) £5 (non-members) includes light refreshments. Pay at the door. Visitors welcome.

Anthony Sheridan is a Freeman of the City of London and a European Zoo Specialist. His chosen topic is “Leading British and German Zoos: the way ahead in a world of decimated tropical habitats”. Anthony believes that ideally, the modern zoo should be an animal paradise where both animals and visitors are at home. Recent decades have witnessed a transformation in the role, importance and performance of Europe's major zoos, nearly half of which are located in Germany and the United Kingdom.

Creating a comfortable environment for both animals and visitors at Europe's leading zoos

Following our very successful talk on the resurrection of Dresden, I would like to invite you and your members to a very special talk on German and English zoos by Anthony Sheridan, Fellow of the Zoological Society of London.

Anthony has visited most of the major European zoos in the last few years and is an acknowledged authority on the subject. I am attaching a leaflet/poster and would be grateful if you could bring this talk to the notice of your members.

Please enter Wednesday 26th May in your diary. You will all be very welcome.

With kind regards and hoping this talk will be of interest to you.
